

„Bring Poland to G20 and don't cry for Argentina”, „The Economist”, 5 March 2014

Why is Argentina still in the G20 club of countries? Brazil and Mexico could sufficiently represent Latin American countries. If it seemed justified to invite Argentina into the G20 15 years ago, it is not the case anymore. Poland is a much more suitable country for the G20, with sound institutions and responsible policies that helped it avoid recession during the world economic crisis.

It enjoys 8% higher GDP per head than Argentina. Unlike Argentina and many others, Poland advanced by ten places in the World Bank's "Doing Business" ranking for 2014. It is the most successful among post-communist transition economies. Out of the 35 countries in this group, only Russia is a member of the G20.

Bring Poland to the G20, and don't cry for Argentina.

Professor Grzegorz Kolodko
Former finance minister of Poland
Warsaw